MARTLAND FOLLTION.

Insteads emaneipationists of the Winter Davis school, say that the election of Gov. Bicks as U. S. Senstor, in Maryland, is a triumph of the gradual emancipation party. They explain it by saying that the disputes as to the minor office had broken the column of the immediate emancipation party, and that once broken nearly all went over in a body for Bicks, in order to be on the winning side. They claim that they still have a mesorus rollatios.

Frank Blair arrived this morning and wa, in the House a little while to-day. His policy as it is now intimated, is to fight the Missouri Radicals, but at the same time to become the special champion of Mr. Lincoln, and so find to the control of the same time to be come the special champion of Mr. Lincoln, and so find special champson of Mr. Lincoln, and so find a footing for himself again in the administration party.

The question of Schodeid's confirmation is developing into a very pretty fight in the Senate. The chances are very much mixed, and it is idle to attempt to predict the result though the weight of opinion scena to be that he cannot be confirmed.

New York: Sheldon & Co.: Moston: Gould & Lincoln: Chicago: S. C. Grigge & Co. The Wars of the Colonies is the hast of the series by Mr. Abbot and embraces the governmental formation of the Colonies, the Pequot War, the war with King Philip, Father Marquette's Expedition, King William's and Queen Anne's wars, the Third French war, the Conquest of Canada, and Pontiac's war. This presents a wide and interesting field and Mr. Abbot has well improved it, presenting the salient points of these memorable colonial campaigns in a condensed and vicorous manner, especially adapted for yound, but also furnishing an excellent source of reference for he student in history. The work is finely linestrated with engravings and explanatory maps.

Healy has immortalized upon his clowing canvass one of the talented family of Hoppins. Thomas, and now another, Augustus. is before the public with the productions of his graphic pencil. Carrot Pomade is the record of a poor fellow who suddenly became rich by the discovery of carrot pomade. The letter press is very stupid but the illustrations are in Hoppin's best manner, admirably drawn and full of life and spirit, many of them rivating in broad humor and quaint touches the best efforts of Crulishank. We advise everybody who has a taste for engravings to purchase this little book. It is a gem.

AUT AND THE WAR. Espart of the Pine Arts Committee of the New York Historical Society.

Among the reports presented to the New York Historical Society at its recent annual meeting was one by the Committee on the Fine Arts, which boautifully describes the progress of art in the United States during the war. It was read on behalf of the Com-mittee by William J. Hoppin. After some preliminary observations relating to ordinary support, Col. Slebert belied his men in line of battle, the rebis wheeling at the same time as if "tranother charge, but remained idle. The suspense continued but for a moment, when the whole brigade of Col. Long, numbering say 1,200 men, arrived at the scene of action, and after wheeling into line—but the work of a moment—made a sabre charge upor the chemy, which they were anable to withstand vere for a moment, but instantly broke in confusion, each man apparently endeavoring to take care of himself.

The main body fied toward Dalton; but epon every road and along every footpath were squads flying pell-mell, harry-sourry, toward a place of safety. I sam told that after the pursuit was commenced, the flight of the rebels was Indicrous in the extreme. Hittes, with their long hair flying about their coals standing almost straight rearward, they locked like a collection of John Gibbins, cach frightened out of his senses by the blue-coated phalany behind.

In the pursuit one hundred and twenty-three of the rebels fell into our hands, and no less than forty-seven were either killed or wounded, to the knowledge of Col. Long, Our less is variously reported; some say but one, others half a dozen wounded and none killed. One man was missing—perhaps taken prisoner. The rebels did not even injure a wagon, a mule, or a set of harness. The triumph was but momentary, so that they could not have done mischief if they would.

The pursuit continued for five unlies on the Balton road, where it was abandoned; but several days the they change of prisoners will yet be swelled to two hundred.

The brunt of the fight was sustained by the 4th Chio cavairy and the 20th Missouri nonted lafantry, and every officer and man acquitted himself, not only creditably, but notes here it was abandoned; but save been prowling around for several days in the vicinity of the Knoxville road, but have been misormly daven off by our forces. They have assacted one or two camen posts, but in each instance were badly worsted.
